BAD SOLDIERS.

They Give the Government Much

Concern. Over Fourteen Hundred Discharged

Tenses by Disanissing Them.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—In the new army regulations it is proposed to adopt generally the rule of punishing men who are inefficient and guilty of minor offenses, by discharging them from the army service immediately. This rule prevails partielly now. Adj. Gen. Ruggles' last report shows that the loss of enlisted men during the year included about 1.08 discharged of the properties of the properties. The properties of the properties of the properties of the properties. Cen. Howard's report shows that there were forty-nine more general court-martial trials has year than the year before, an increase of forty-four in trials by all courts. He stated that a large proportion of these trials had been for "violations of articles of war which cover minor offenses. When the charges are accompanied by records of previous triels and convictions, these trials almost invariebly result in the trials almost invariebly result in the critical services.

Gen. Howard adds the following comment: "In view of the fact that, as reported by the inspector, the number lost to the service by purchase, and taking into consideration the great expense estending the convening of general court-martial, and the bring ing of this class of offenders to justice. I am of the opinion that it would be in the interest of economy and in new you interesting with justice if such cases could be tried before garrisor courts and the culprit sicharyed up articular to the culprit sicharyed up a court and the culprit sicharyed up a court and the culprit is discharged up articularly to the question whether it is not expedient to adopt a still more extensive policy of discharging mer who are not valuable to the army, and who are brought up for offenses carry ing terms of imprisonment as senal ties. The chief reason for the consideration of this matter is that with this tary prison to the department of justice many more offenders will here to be taken care of by army posts that herectofore.

The idea that it is to make the expense for the care of these men lighter, which for the care of these men lighter, which of the care of the care of these men lighter, which of the care of the care of these men lighter, which of the care of the care of the care of these men lighter, which the care of t tice many more offenders will have to be taken care of by army posts that herestofore.

The iden het is to moke the expense the control of th men who reasonably attend to their duty.

Care has to be taken also not to encourage by frequent discharges of men charged with minor offenses, others to take this way of securing discharges that they might save to themselves the cost of purchasing discharges at the cost of purchasing discharges who committed a small offense were to be dropped from the army this would be a more popular way of getting out of the service than by the purchase of a discharge. It is expected that the matter will soon be permanently settled, with certain limitations.

It was to be a combersome wapon, more like a toy cannon than a pistol. The flist pas stands out the size of a silver quarter, and the wide mouthed berrel rests almost from end to end in a heavy wooden stock.
To carry it in a modern pocket would be out of the question, for it is host too heavy and too long. The pistol was presented to Mrs. Buckner some years ago by Senator Blackburn. It was obtained by him from the Marshall family, who came into possession of it from Chlef Justice Marshall, as well as can be remembered. Its history is well authenticated, and there is no doubt that it is the very weapon from which the fatal bullet sped which ended Hamliton's life and Burr's political career. Burr owned a brace of these pistois, but the other has been lost eight of long ago.
